Delaware History Museum and Center for African American Heritage Grand Opening Set for October 1st

The Delaware Historical Society celebrates updated Wilmington attractions with a historic block party.

Wilmington, DE — With the completion of a major transformation of its Wilmington campus, the Delaware Historical Society is set to unveil the Delaware History Museum, Old Town Hall, the new Center for African American Heritage, and a new exhibition called Delaware: One State, Many Stories, which presents the most well-known aspects of our state’s history as well as stories that will be new to most visitors. A grand opening celebration is planned for Saturday, October 1, 2016 from 10:00 am - 4:00 pm when the public is invited to tour the exhibition and take part in a family-friendly historic block party. Admission to the museum, programs, and entertainment is free of charge October 1st.

The project began in 2014 to commemorate the Society’s 150th-anniversary and was made possible by the Sesquicentennial Campaign: Ensuring a Future for Delaware’s Past, which has raised $6.8 million. The campaign supported improvements to Old Town Hall and the Delaware History Museum to increase accessibility, update classrooms and other education spaces, and create additional galleries and exhibition spaces. The installation of a new core exhibition documenting Delaware’s history and the creation of the Center for African American Heritage, the first such space dedicated to sharing the stories and experiences of African Americans in Delaware, were also an integral component of the campaign.

“The many improvements support the Delaware Historical Society’s focus on history education as well as the role and value of history in contemporary society,” said Scott Loehr, CEO of the Delaware Historical Society. “Visitors will experience Delaware’s history and its many complexities in new and compelling ways.”

Inside the Delaware History Museum, which includes the new Center for African American Heritage, the new exhibition, Delaware: One State, Many Stories, presents a multi-layered history of the First State in an inclusive and thought-provoking manner representing diverse viewpoints and experiences. Visitors are challenged to contextualize their personal experiences through their engagement with material culture to become empowered as stakeholders in the creation and presentation of historical narratives. The exhibition utilizes a variety of themes to present Delaware’s history including Creating an Identity, Famously Delaware, Forging Faith and Community, and Standing Together for Freedom.

The grand opening is not only cause for celebration among history enthusiasts and scholars, but will also serve as an important resource for Delaware students, their families, and communities across Delaware.

The space is also part of the exciting growth that is taking place along lower Market Street in Wilmington.

About the Grand Opening Block Party:

The grand opening of the Delaware History Museum and the new Center for African American Heritage will take place on Saturday, October 1, 2016 from 10:00 am – 4:00 pm at 504 North Market Street with a historic block party celebration. The free event kicks off with a ribbon cutting followed by exciting, educational programs and activities inside the museum and performances on North Market Street. The day will include family-friendly fun, tours of the new museum, performances, food trucks, music, and more.

Performers will include a New Orleans style Second Line Parade featuring Gerald Chavis and other area musicians, the Sussex Tech "Raven Nation" Marching Band; Twin Poets, Nnamdi Chukwuocha and Albert Mills, Sankofa African Dance Company, and a Leni-Lenape tribal drumming and dancing group among others. There will be appearances by the University of Delaware's YoUDee and Baby Blue, the Wilmington Blue Rock's Rocky Bluewinkle, as well as face painting and a voting rights activity for children featuring a mock election complete with a voting booth from the Department of Elections. WSTW FM will broadcast live from 11 am to 2 pm.

About the Delaware Historical Society:
