MORE TERRIBLE THAN ALL THE WORDS
War is more terrible than all the words of men can say; more terrible than a man's mind can comprehend.
It is the corpse of a friend; one moment ago a living human being with thoughts, hopes, and a future—just exactly like yourself—now nothing.
It is the eyes of men after battle, like muddy water, lightless.
It is cities—labor of generations lost—now dusty piles of broken stones and splintered wood—dead.
It is the total pain of a hundred million parted loved ones—some for always.
It is the impossibility of planning a future; uncertainty that mocks every hoping dream.
Remember! It is the reality of these things—not the words.

And when it is in your mind so strongly that you can never forget, then seek how you can best keep peace. Work at this hard with every tool of thought and love you have. Do not rest until you can say to every man who ever died for man's happiness: "You did not die in vain."

Men in Bombers
FIGHTER pilots get emotion because their work is quick and it ends before the emotion has time to end, and the emotion is still with them when they climb out of their planes. A fighter pilot can get drunk at his work, emotionally drunk, but a heavy bomber pilot just works, an aerial taxi driver he calls himself, a freight engineer and he just works and the men who fly with him just work.
Long-range heavy bombardment takes hours, three and four hours going and three and four hours returning, and that is too long for emotion to last. There is brief emotion when the enemy closes in and there is the feeling of combat, vicarious for everyone except the men at the guns at the moment, and the bombardier gets it briefly when he squeezes and the bombs cascade out, but those moments are lost in the long monotony of the mission, the hours of steady, noisy airplane pounding in the air, the deadly drugging effect of the engines on nerves, the long times, one hour, two hours, three hours, four hours, on oxygen, the careful, precise, non-amusing, can't be done improperly stream of things that the pilot, the engineer, the radio man, the navigator have to do, the sitting and waiting, ears aching, head rocking, mind-salter hours, sometimes tilting mentally forward for something that may never come, pitching mentally over when it does not come. Men who fly bombers and who fly in bombers come out of their airplanes exhausted and bored in a way no one was ever bored before. Men who fly in bombers are not really older than the men who fly in other kinds of airplanes; they just look that way.
Elliott Arnold, in "Tomorrow Will Sing." (Duell, Sloan & Pearce.)
