00:00-00:36	[H1] Introduction	Join us in this new series from the archives of the Delaware Historical Society, as we meet people whose fascinating life stories have shaped American history. Explore rare artifacts that tell us about life from another time and learn how our shared history can be found everywhere around us, if you know where to look. It's politics, religion, art, music, and culture. Join us to discover the human side of our history. Visit dehistory.org to learn more.	The video opens with a montage of clips from videos in the series, starting with a drone shot of the arch on Market Street flying away from Delaware Historical Society. The video pans collections storage at the Delaware Historical Society and zooms in on a flag behind a glass case. The video shows images of figures, including Harriet Tubman. The video shows other shots of Delaware Historical Society buildings and spaces. At the end of the video, the background fades to white and shows " dehistory.org ," and then appears the Delaware Historical Society logo. The video transitions to another screen with a white background and text that reads, "Delaware Historical Society videos have been funded by the Longwood Foundation, Delmarva Power, an Exelon Company, and a grant from the Delaware Humanities, a state program of the National Endowment of the Humanities." Below the text are logos for (left to right) Longwood Foundation, Delmarva Power, and Delaware Humanities.
