“Liberty in Our Grasp” lesson plans were developed through a partnership between the Delaware Historical Society and the Hard History Project with financial support from the State of Delaware Division of Historical and Cultural Affairs and M&T Bank.

Developed by: Kirsten Campbell

This mini unit is meant to be taught over 3–5-days and incorporates several resources from a range of sites and organizations. Each lesson begins with a framework outlining essential knowledge and materials needed to carry out the lesson. The essential knowledge is taken from Learning for Justice: Teaching Hard History standards. Clicking the essential knowledge links on the slide deck will give the teacher a deeper understanding of the standard. The framework is followed by the information teachers will convey, including a slide deck, Student Activity Sheet(s), and resources. In addition, each lesson ends with a culminating activity for teachers to gauge each student’s level of understanding.

This mini unit is by no means a cumulative unit on American enslavement, rather, it is meant to be used within a larger history unit. As experts in their field, teachers may choose to extend or compact this mini unit depending on the age group, state standards, and level of discussion in their class. While the information in this mini unit is essential to student learning, it is sensitive information and is not meant to be rushed through or taken lightly. As you deliver content to students, please keep the focus on the humans behind these stories and their lived experiences.

Materials
- Slide deck
- Newspaper Excerpt: Reward and sale notices for enslaved people, unidentified newspaper, 1790
- YouTube: “Ex-slaves Talk about Slavery in the USA”
- Document Analysis and Reflection Worksheet, Video Reflection Worksheet, and 3-2-1 Exit Ticket

Procedure

Introduction (5 minutes)

Slide 3
Read to students: Think about all the advertisements you see on TV, on the internet, in the newspaper, on commercials, and in other places.

Ask: What kinds of things are advertised?
Let students give examples of various products. Show pictures.

Slide 4

Ask: Have you ever seen a human life for sale in an advertisement? (Let students answer and address any misconceptions.)

Ask: What would your reaction be if you saw one? (Let students share reactions. This is your time to set the serious tone of the lesson in a way fit for your class.)
Record student reaction words.

Activity 1: Enslavement Ads (10-15 minutes)

Slide 5

Read directions to students: With a partner or on your own, take 5 minutes to read through the following newspaper advertisements. Reflect on your Document Analysis and Reflection worksheet, including answering the questions below:

- What is being advertised?
- What year is this newspaper from?
- How does this make you feel?

*Be sure students know that letters that look like an “f” are actually the letter “s”.

Pass out hard copies of Reward and sale notices for enslaved people to students. Give students the option to reflect on their own or with a partner. Ensure students feel comfortable working with their partner. This material may be difficult for students to see. As they read, circle around the room to help students read and reflect. Set a timer for 5 minutes, then come back together for a group discussion.

Slide 6

This is the slide where teacher craft comes into play. As you introduce the lesson, you may point out words or concepts that spark emotion (“property”, reward prices, humans being sold alongside animals, etc.). You may want to read ads titled “Four Dollars Reward” and “To Be Sold” aloud. They are pictured on the slide. Ask the following questions. Give wait time between each question.

- What is being advertised?
- What year is this newspaper from?

<td>Read to students: In the 1930s and ‘40s, a man named John Henry Faulk sat down and spoke with formerly enslaved men and women. In this video, we will hear Fountain Hughes, Harriet Smith, and Laura Smalley tell their stories of being enslaved as children. As they tell their stories, write down any reactions you have on the Video Reflection worksheet.</td>
