Wednesday evening, April 25th, 1945

Dear General, Assistant, Major General:

Yesterday, the President, Generalissimo Chiang, and Generalissimoissimo Stalin met in Moscow. A combination from the Four Great Powers. It was a long and hard struggle, but now the struggle is ended. The Axis has been defeated and the war is over. The world will never again be the same. A new United Nations has been founded and will provide for peace and security. The United Nations is a symbol of hope for the future. The world will be a better place with the United Nations in charge.

Our airbase has been transformed into a busy training center in anticipation of the peace. Finally, cease in Europe.
Tumors are flying thick and fast, of course but as yet there is nothing definite. Pilots are getting reviews of transition training, flying techniques, instrument flying, night flying and engineering.
Navigators and bombardiers are being checked on night and day navigation, dead reckoning, plotage, celestial radio and radar. Crews are being processed plans are being overhauled and records are being put in order. Maybe our Fourth of July date will have to be changed.

Your packages of film just got here and arrived. I try to change but to good sense. You should better not send film smoke though. Your letters have been coming through very well.

Love

[Signature]

[Date]